

Nick Gordon Pleads to See Bobbi Kristina Brown Again, Says Whitney Told Him to 'Protect' Her

CULTURE | By Matt Donnelly on February 27, 2015 @ 4:31 pm

Follow @MattDonnelly

As 21-year-old struggles for her life in the hospital, live-in boyfriend says, “The Browns have shut me out”

Nick Gordon has taken to social media once again with pleas to visit his girlfriend Bobbi Kristina Brown, who is currently in an induced coma with no clear recovery in sight.

Gordon, who frequently uses his Twitter account to vent frustrations over the Brown and Houston families isolating him from his 21-year-old partner, invoked Bobbi Kristina’s late mother Whitney Houston on Thursday.

“Whitney told me to protect [her] and i did with no help,” Gordon wrote, “... that family has the nerve to blame me when I saved her life, I haven’t seen most of them in 8 years then they come when she needs me the most.”

Also Read: Bobbi Kristina Brown’s ‘Marriage’ – Fantasy, Family History and a Union Created on Social Media

Gordon has been banned from Bobbi Kristina’s bedside at Atlanta’s Emory University hospital since early February, attorneys for the 24-year-old previously confirmed.

Representatives for Gordon, Bobbi Kristina’s father Bobby Brown and the Houston family have not yet returned TheWrap’s request for comment.

Nick Gordon
@nickdgordon

Follow

Whitney told me to protect and i did with no help.

12:12 PM - 25 Feb 2015

21 RETWEETS 66 FAVORITES

“My heart is full of angry after the Browns have shut me out they don’t even know her. Sabotage,” he continued.

Nick Gordon
@nickdgordon

Follow

My heart is full of angry after the Browns have shut me out they don't even know her. Sabotage.

3:47 PM - 25 Feb 2015

13 RETWEETS 61 FAVORITES

Gordon is convinced his presence would improve Bobbi Kristina’s condition, which is murky at best considering a Tuesday attempt to bring her out of the induced coma rpeorteldy resulted in heavy seizures.

“Real talk let her hear my voice she will wake up, ” Gordon said.

Nick Gordon

@nickdgordon

Follow

Real talk let her hear my voice she will wake up

5:46 PM - 26 Feb 2015

30 RETWEETS 103 FAVORITES

Also Read: Whitney Houston's Millions: What Bobbi Kristina Brown May Leave Behind and Who Stands to Gain

Unfortunately, a hospital visit from loved ones isn't likely to change her comatose state. Doctors have yet to assess the damage caused when Bobbi Kristina was discovered unconscious, face down in her bathtub, as every time she's been weaned off of drugs keeping her in a coma, the young woman reportedly suffers seizures.

"When you damage the brain by lack of oxygen, the brain cells themselves cause seizure," Dr. Asher Taban, Director of Neuroscience at Northridge Hospital Medical Center, told TheWrap on Thursday. "The coma suppresses the seizure activity."

But the extent of the brain damage is difficult to determine when a patient is in a medically induced coma, making it a normal part of treatment to take the patient out of the coma to assess his or her condition more accurately.

"After you withdraw the treatment, you may know what is going on under the surface," Dr. Taban said. "This is a part of recovery, and a part of manifesting what injuries exist."

But Dr. Taban said that the seizures reportedly suffered by Bobbi Kristina when she was taken out of the coma could damage potentially viable brain cells. Reports that she was immediately put back into an induced coma he said, would indicate the proper course of treatment.

For all the loved ones praying for Bobbi Kristina's recovery, the recent medical setback doesn't reveal progress either way. The only thing they can do is wait, the neurosurgeon said.

"Now it's a matter of waiting a few weeks and seeing how she's doing. I would advise [the families] they have to stay strong, remain hopeful, give it time. Don't lose faith. In a case like this, the younger someone is the better," Taban said.